Hi!

I just picked up a "Bally" and all of the stuff that goes with it from Bill Kopp, which, of course included all the past issues of the 'Arcadian'. He went out and got himself an Apple; therefore I doubt if he will be renewing his subscription.

I do want to get on your list for the volume 2, and am enclosing my check for same.

I should also like to add my name to those who answered your questionnaire regarding the add on to the Bally. I would put myself in the category which indicated they would be interested in additional capabilities for a price range of about $300.00.

Incidentally, has anyone indicated trouble with their unit overheating? I had mine go bad just about a month after I had it, Bill of course had it for some four months so the initial warranty ran out, I was a little reluctant to get into it myself, although I had determined the trouble was the diode bridge which 'smoked'; anyway the agent here is 'Teledyne' they replaced the whole board, cost was $35.. However, my point was that this unit seems to get just a little warm just to the left of the keypad and to forestall such happening in the future I intend to drill a few holes there which should let a little air circulate. There are a couple of heat sinks just there and I think a little air wouldn't hurt.

Just before the unit smoked out, it would stop functioning in the middle of a program, no reaction to keypad and the screen would display weird pattern 'game over' etc and sometimes what looks like a picture of a 'chip'. Just pass this on for what it may be worth,

Looking forward to volume 2, I am,

Sincerely,
